

A lot of snow, not many avalanches

Date

Thu, 02/23/2023 - 13:00

Activity

Snowmobiling

In Cooke City a large storm dropped 4.5" of snow water equivalent (4 feet of snow) and there were a few avalanches reported during and immediately after the storm. We saw one large avalanche on a south facing slope on Meridian, and a smaller wind-loaded slope that avalanched on Mt. Abundance (photo). We saw no other activity. Our concern is the interface between the old snow and new snow. The avalanche activity seemed to break here and on slopes with a wind-load it's worth being extra careful.

Meridian: R2, D2.5 (likely last night, 2/22)

Abundance: R3, D1.5 (maybe on 2/21)

Region

Cooke City

Location (from list)

COOKE CITY

Observer Name

Doug Chabot