

Old Natural Avalanche in Tepee Basin

Date

Wed, 01/24/2024 - 15:35

Activity

Snowmobiling

We rode into Tepee Basin today to practice rescue skills with snow rangers from different districts across the Custer-Gallatin Forest. On top of a great day riding and practicing rescue skills we saw a natural avalanche above the first meadow of Tepee. This avalanche is old and likely happened a few days ago near the end of the last storm on 01/20. NE facing slope at ~8500 feet.

There is plenty of snow on the ground to practice rescue. Now is as good of a time as any to get out and practice your skills!

Region

Southern Madison

Location (from list)

Tepee Basin

Observer Name

Zach Peterson